On Petition from Multiple Federal and State Proceedings

(Fourth Circuit Nos. 25-1222 & 25-1224; Court of Federal Claims / Federal Circuit No. 25-1522; District of Maryland 1:25-cv-04130-BAH; District Court of Maryland D-01-CR-25-011145; and related matters)

Filed: _____, 2026

Caustin Lee McLaughlin
Petitioner, Pro Se
[Current Address or "Currently Homeless"]
1525 Newton Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20010 (last known)

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether a federal court of appeals exceeds its statutory authority, and thereby acts ultra vires, when it transfers a Tucker Act claim under 28 U.S.C. § 1631 from the Court of Federal Claims—the court of exclusive jurisdiction—despite the absence of any jurisdictional defect in the original forum, and whether such a transfer, when followed by coordination with federal and local law-enforcement agencies resulting in the physical removal of the claimant from his residence, violates the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and is reviewable by this Court under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a).

2. Whether the systemic refusal of a federal agency (the Social Security Administration) to evaluate objective genomic evidence (polygenic risk scores, candidate-gene polymorphisms, and related neuroimaging) in disability adjudications, while simultaneously denying AI-assisted cognitive accommodations to a claimant with documented executive-function impairments, constitutes arbitrary and capricious agency action under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A), and a denial of meaningful access under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 794, and Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

3. Whether a criminal prosecution initiated on the basis of an affidavit that is alleged to contain material falsehoods, filed by an affiant who himself is subject to active bench warrants, and temporally proximate to the claimant's protected federal litigation activity, can support claims of malicious prosecution and First Amendment retaliation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and whether the resulting restraints on liberty warrant habeas corpus relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 or § 2254.

4. Whether municipal liability under Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978), may attach to a local sheriff's office for a policy or custom of executing removals without constitutionally adequate process, or for deliberate indifference in the training of deputies regarding the constitutional limits of eviction and removal procedures.

5. Whether the extraordinary concentration of related claims across six distinct federal and state fora—none of which has yet entered a final, appealable judgment on the core constitutional questions—creates a "jurisdictional labyrinth" that frustrates any effective remedy and thereby justifies this Court's exercise of supervisory authority under the All Writs Act to prevent a failure of justice.

OPINIONS BELOW

No final, published opinion of a federal court of appeals or of the highest court of a state exists on the core constitutional questions presented. The procedural posture is as follows:

- United States District Court for the District of Maryland, No. 1:25-cv-04130-BAH: Orders of dismissal entered January 16, 2026, and February 19, 2026 (failure to prosecute / related grounds). Appeals taken to the Fourth Circuit (Nos. 25-1222, 25-1224).
- United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, Nos. 25-1222 & 25-1224: Pending.
- United States Court of Federal Claims, No. 1:25-cv-00141-RAH (or related docket): Tucker Act / illegal-exaction claim transferred under 28 U.S.C. § 1631; transfer order itself is the principal object of challenge. No final judgment on the merits.
- United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, related to No. 25-1522: Transfer-related proceedings; no final appellate judgment on the constitutional questions.
- District Court of Maryland, Case No. D-01-CR-25-011145: Arrest warrant issued on the basis of the challenged affidavit; criminal proceedings ongoing or subject to pretrial restraints; no final judgment of conviction.
- Circuit Court for Baltimore City: State-court filings (mandamus, habeas, trust, and related claims) pending or recently initiated.

Because multiple core claims lack a final judgment from a court of appeals or the highest state court, Petitioner proceeds principally under the All Writs Act and this Court's supervisory authority, while also seeking certiorari to the extent any final orders exist.

JURISDICTION

1. This Court has statutory jurisdiction to review final judgments of the courts of appeals by writ of certiorari. 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

2. This Court has authority under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a), to issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of its jurisdiction and agreeable to the usages and principles of law. See United States v. New York Telephone Co., 434 U.S. 159, 172 (1977); Clinton v. Goldsmith, 526 U.S. 529 (1999).

3. This Court has authority to grant writs of habeas corpus. 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

4. Original jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1251 is not claimed as the primary basis for relief; the petition is framed as a supervisory / All Writs Act application arising from the fragmentation of related claims across multiple lower courts.

5. Timeliness: The petition is filed within a reasonable time after the most recent injurious acts (transfer, removal, and continuation of restraints) and after efforts in the courts of appeals and state courts have failed to produce coordinated relief.

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

U.S. Const. amend. V: "No person shall . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law . . ."

U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1: "No State shall . . . deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

28 U.S.C. § 1651(a) (All Writs Act): "The Supreme Court and all courts established by Act of Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law."

28 U.S.C. § 1631: Transfer is authorized only when the transferring court finds a want of jurisdiction.

42 U.S.C. § 1983: Creates a damages remedy against persons acting under color of state law who deprive any citizen of rights secured by the Constitution and laws.

Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978): Municipalities are "persons" under § 1983 when official policy or custom is the moving force of the constitutional violation.

Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents, 403 U.S. 388 (1971): Implied damages remedy against federal officers for certain constitutional violations (narrowly construed in subsequent cases).

Title II of the ADA, 42 U.S.C. § 12132, and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 794: Prohibit discrimination by public entities and recipients of federal financial assistance against qualified individuals with disabilities.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Petitioner's Documented Neurogenetic Profile

Petitioner is a 40-year-old individual with a thoroughly documented neurogenetic and neuropsychological profile. The evidentiary foundation, as limited by data-minimization protocols, consists of:

- Candidate-gene findings consistent with a "triple-hit" dopaminergic inefficiency (DRD4 7R/7R; DAT1/SLC6A3 10R/10R; COMT Val/Val);
- SHANK3-related variants contributing to glutamatergic synaptic inefficiency;
- Polygenic risk scores placing Petitioner in the extreme upper percentiles for ADHD liability and lower percentiles for cognitive-performance prediction;
- Task-based and resting-state fMRI demonstrating frontostriatal hypoactivation (DLPFC, basal ganglia, ACC);
- Structural MRI / DTI findings of reduced gray-matter volume and white-matter integrity in regions supporting executive control;
- Neuropsychological testing (WAIS-IV, CPT-3, WCST, TMT, BRIEF-A, ABAS-3) showing a classic high-crystallized / low-fluid and practical-adaptive scatter profile.

These data are maintained under chain-of-custody protocols with cryptographic hashing and are available for independent expert review under appropriate protective order.

B. The Tucker Act Claim and the Challenged Transfer

Petitioner filed a Tucker Act claim (illegal-exaction / related theories) in the United States Court of Federal Claims, the court of exclusive jurisdiction for such claims exceeding $10,000. See 28 U.S.C. § 1491. The Federal Circuit possesses exclusive appellate jurisdiction over decisions of the Court of Federal Claims. 28 U.S.C. § 1295(a)(3).

Notwithstanding the Court of Federal Claims' jurisdiction, the matter was transferred under 28 U.S.C. § 1631. Section 1631 authorizes transfer only when the transferring court finds a want of jurisdiction. Petitioner contends the transfer was therefore ultra vires and void ab initio. The transfer order itself, and the subsequent inter-agency communications that followed, form a central object of this petition.

C. Coordination with Law Enforcement and Removal from Residence

Following or in connection with the transfer, communications occurred involving federal actors and the United States Marshals Service. The Marshals Service in turn coordinated with the Baltimore City Sheriff's Office and named individual respondents. Petitioner was removed from his residence at [ADDRESS] without what he contends was constitutionally adequate notice, a pre-deprivation hearing, or a meaningful opportunity to be heard. Personal property was seized or lost. Petitioner remains without stable housing.

D. The Affidavit, Warrant, and Criminal Restraints

On or about November 12, 2025, Respondent Jeffery Callicutt submitted an affidavit alleging that Petitioner caused him "serious injury." Contemporaneous hospital records and imaging are alleged to have been negative for injury. At the time, Callicutt is alleged to have had active bench warrants of his own. An arrest warrant issued (Case No. D-01-CR-25-011145). Petitioner was subjected to arrest, detention, and pretrial restraints. Petitioner contends the warrant is void under Franks v. Delaware, 438 U.S. 154 (1978), and that the prosecution is retaliatory in light of temporal proximity to protected federal litigation.

E. Disability Benefits and Cognitive Accommodations

Petitioner submitted genomic, neuroimaging, and neuropsychological evidence in support of Social Security disability claims. Benefits were denied. Requests for AI-assisted cognitive accommodations (termed "Gov-LLM" or executive-function prosthetics) in administrative and judicial proceedings were denied or ignored. Petitioner contends these actions violate the APA, Section 504, and Title II of the ADA.

F. The Six-Jurisdiction Labyrinth and the Exhaustion Problem

The claims are now scattered across at least six fora:

1. U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland (dismissals; appeals pending);
2. U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit (pending);
3. U.S. Court of Federal Claims / Federal Circuit (transfer without merits adjudication);
4. D.C. Circuit / District Court proceedings (related mandamus and digital-evidence matters);

5. Circuit Court for Baltimore City (state claims, habeas, trust);

6. This Court (present petition).

No single court has yet entered a final judgment that fully resolves the interrelated constitutional questions. This fragmentation is itself a central feature of the case.

EXHAUSTION OF LOWER-COURT REMEDIES: A DETAILED ANALYSIS

A. The Ordinary Requirement of Finality for Certiorari

Under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1) and Supreme Court Rule 10, this Court reviews final judgments of the courts of appeals (and, in appropriate cases, of the highest courts of the states). A judgment is final when it ends the litigation on the merits and leaves nothing for the court to do but execute the judgment. The existence of ongoing proceedings, interlocutory transfers, and dismissals without prejudice or for failure to prosecute complicates the ordinary path to certiorari.

In the present matter:

- The Fourth Circuit appeals (Nos. 25-1222, 25-1224) remain pending. Until those appeals are decided and any petition for rehearing is resolved, there is no final judgment of a court of appeals on the claims that were dismissed by the District of Maryland.
- The Court of Federal Claims transfer under § 1631 produced no merits adjudication. A transfer order is ordinarily not a final judgment appealable as of right; challenges to transfer are typically raised after a final judgment in the transferee court, or, in extraordinary circumstances, by mandamus.
- The District Court of Maryland criminal proceedings have not produced a final judgment of conviction. Habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 generally requires that the petitioner be "in custody" pursuant to a state-court judgment; pretrial restraints may support § 2241 relief in limited circumstances, but ordinary exhaustion doctrines still apply.
- State-court proceedings in the Circuit Court for Baltimore City are recent or ongoing.

Accordingly, the strict requirements for a conventional petition for a writ of certiorari are not fully satisfied as to every claim. Petitioner acknowledges this reality.

B. Why Petitioner Nonetheless Invokes This Court's Authority

Petitioner contends that the ordinary exhaustion framework has been rendered ineffective by the very conduct challenged:

1. Jurisdictional fragmentation as a feature, not a bug. The transfer of the Tucker Act claim, the dismissals in the District of Maryland, the initiation of criminal proceedings in state court, and the physical removal from housing have the cumulative effect of preventing any single court from reaching the core constitutional questions. When lower courts' jurisdictional and procedural rulings themselves create the barrier to relief, insistence on conventional exhaustion can become circular.

2. All Writs Act authority. The All Writs Act authorizes writs "necessary or appropriate in aid of [the Court's] respective jurisdictions." 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a). This Court and the courts of appeals have used the Act to protect the integrity of the judicial process and to prevent frustration of jurisdiction. See United States v. New York Telephone Co., 434 U.S. 159 (1977); In re Kellogg Brown & Root, Inc., 756 F.3d 754 (D.C. Cir. 2014). Petitioner argues that the multi-fora labyrinth threatens to render any eventual appellate review meaningless because of irreparable interim harm (loss of housing, continuation of restraints, ongoing denial of benefits and accommodations).

3. Irreparable harm and the balance of equities. Petitioner is without income, without stable housing, and subject to criminal restraints alleged to rest on a false affidavit. Each day of delay compounds the risk of irreversible injury. Traditional exhaustion doctrine is not absolute when the litigant faces irreparable harm and no adequate alternative forum exists.

4. Systemic character of the claims. The petition challenges not only individual adverse actions but an alleged pattern of inter-agency coordination, refusal of cognitive accommodations, and exclusion of genomic evidence. Such systemic claims are difficult to litigate to final judgment in any single case; they are the type of issue for which supervisory authority is sometimes invoked.

C. Counter-Arguments and Realistic Assessment

A reviewing court is likely to conclude:

- Many of the claims remain pending in the Fourth Circuit or in state court; those courts are the proper fora for initial resolution.
- Absolute judicial immunity bars damages claims against judges for acts taken in their judicial capacity, even if those acts are later determined to have been erroneous.
- Bivens remedies have been narrowly construed; extension to new contexts is disfavored.

- Challenges to ongoing state criminal proceedings may be barred by Younger abstention.
- The All Writs Act is not a substitute for the ordinary appellate process and is available only in extraordinary circumstances.

Petitioner nevertheless presents the petition so that this Court may determine whether the circumstances rise to the level of extraordinary need.

D. Exhaustion Efforts Already Undertaken

Petitioner has:

- Filed and pursued claims in the Court of Federal Claims;
- Contested the § 1631 transfer;
- Litigated in the District of Maryland and taken appeals to the Fourth Circuit;
- Sought relief in D.C. Circuit / District Court proceedings;
- Initiated or maintained proceedings in the Circuit Court for Baltimore City;
- Applied for disability benefits and requested accommodations at the agency level;
- Sought IFP status in multiple courts.

These efforts, while extensive, have not produced a coordinated final resolution of the interrelated constitutional questions. That is the core of the exhaustion argument advanced here.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

A. The Petition Presents Questions of National Importance

The proper treatment of objective genomic and neuroimaging evidence in federal disability adjudications, the availability of AI-assisted cognitive accommodations for claimants with executive-function impairments, and the limits of inter-branch and inter-agency coordination in the enforcement of judicial process are questions that affect thousands of claimants and the integrity of the administrative and judicial systems.

B. The Lower Courts Are Divided or Unable to Provide Complete Relief

No lower court has yet issued a definitive ruling on the central questions. The fragmentation across six fora itself demonstrates the need for supervisory guidance.

C. The Decision Below (to the Extent Final Orders Exist) Conflicts with Established Precedent

To the extent the District of Maryland dismissals and the Federal Circuit transfer are treated as final for present purposes, they are alleged to conflict with the jurisdictional limits of § 1631, the due-process requirements of Mathews v. Eldridge and Goldberg v. Kelly, the accommodation mandates of the ADA and Rehabilitation Act, and the Franks standard for warrants based on false affidavits.

D. This Case Is an Appropriate Vehicle

The record contains detailed medical, genetic, and procedural documentation. The issues are cleanly presented. The irreparable-harm showing is substantial.

ARGUMENT

I. The § 1631 Transfer Was Ultra Vires and the Subsequent Coordination Violated Due Process

Section 1631 permits transfer only upon a finding of want of jurisdiction. The Court of Federal Claims possessed jurisdiction over the Tucker Act claim. The transfer was therefore unauthorized. The subsequent communications with the Marshals Service and local law enforcement, culminating in removal from housing without adequate process, compounded the constitutional injury. Absolute judicial immunity may protect individual judges from damages liability, but it does not preclude declaratory or extraordinary-writ relief directed at the legal effect of the transfer order itself, nor does it immunize non-judicial actors who participated in the physical removal.

II. The SSA's Treatment of Genomic Evidence and Denial of Cognitive Accommodations Violate the APA, Section 504, and Title II of the ADA

An agency acts arbitrarily and capriciously when it fails to consider an important aspect of the problem or offers an explanation that runs counter to the evidence. Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass'n v. State Farm, 463 U.S. 29 (1983). The categorical discounting of validated polygenic and neuroimaging evidence, without reasoned explanation, meets that standard. Separately, the refusal to provide or permit AI-assisted cognitive supports for a claimant with documented executive-function impairments denies meaningful access under Alexander v. Choate, 469 U.S. 287 (1985), and the ADA Title II / Section 504 framework.

III. The Criminal Proceedings Rest on a Warrant Alleged to Be Void Under Franks and Support Claims of Malicious Prosecution and Retaliation

A warrant based on an affidavit containing material falsehoods knowingly or recklessly included is void under Franks. The temporal proximity between protected litigation activity and the initiation of charges, combined with the alleged lack of probable cause and the affiant's own fugitive status, supports an inference of retaliatory motive under Hartman v. Moore, 547 U.S. 250 (2006). The resulting restraints on liberty support habeas corpus relief.

IV. Monell Liability May Attach to the Baltimore City Sheriff's Office

Under Monell, a municipality is liable when its official policy or custom is the moving force of a constitutional violation, or when a failure to train amounts to deliberate indifference. The alleged pattern of process-deficient removals, if proven, satisfies the policy-or-custom or failure-to-train theories.

V. The All Writs Act Supplies Authority to Prevent a Failure of Justice

Where related claims are fragmented across multiple courts in a manner that prevents any effective remedy, and where irreparable harm is ongoing, this Court retains authority under § 1651(a) to issue process necessary to protect its jurisdiction and the integrity of the judicial system.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Petitioner respectfully prays that this Court:

1. Grant leave to proceed in forma pauperis under Supreme Court Rule 39 and 28 U.S.C. § 1915;

2. Issue a writ of certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit (and, as appropriate, to other courts) to review the questions presented;

3. In the alternative, issue extraordinary writs under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a), directing the lower courts and agencies to take the actions necessary to prevent a failure of justice, including but not limited to:

   (a) Vacating or staying the effect of the challenged § 1631 transfer to the extent necessary to restore the Court of Federal Claims' ability to adjudicate the Tucker Act claim on the merits;

   (b) Directing the District of Maryland and the Fourth Circuit to coordinate briefing and disposition of the pending appeals and to consider appointment of counsel under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(1);

   (c) Directing the Commissioner of Social Security to evaluate the genomic and neuroimaging evidence under reasoned decision-making standards and to provide or permit reasonable cognitive accommodations;

   (d) Directing preservation of all property seized in the removal and maintenance of the status quo pending further order;

   (e) Issuing a writ of habeas corpus or equivalent process discharging Petitioner from restraints imposed pursuant to the warrant alleged to be void under Franks;

4. Declare that the coordinated refusal of cognitive accommodations and the exclusion of objective genomic evidence, as applied to Petitioner, violate the APA, Section 504, and Title II of the ADA;

5. Award such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper, including costs under the Equal Access to Justice Act to the extent applicable.

Petitioner does not request that this Court itself award academic degrees, order the release of specific financial instruments held by the Treasury, or create a free-standing commission of inquiry; those requests, to the extent previously advanced, are withdrawn or deferred in favor of the relief set forth above.

APPLICATION FOR LEAVE TO PROCEED IN FORMA PAUPERIS

Pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 39 and 28 U.S.C. § 1915, Petitioner respectfully requests leave to proceed without prepayment of fees and costs.

Petitioner declares under penalty of perjury that he is unable to pay the costs of this proceeding. He has no income, no assets of value, is currently homeless following the removal described herein, and proceeds pro se because of documented disabilities and lack of resources. A detailed declaration appears in the accompanying materials.
